Course Description
The Second Sex is Beauvoir’s most important philosophical work, and the book credited with being the intellectual spark of the international 2nd wave feminist movement. This course will focus on a close reading of the new translation of The Second Sex, rather than a broad selection of philosophical writings. Secondary readings will be assigned, especially though not exclusively for graduate students.

Texts
Secondary readings will be in a Course Reader on reserve at the copy shop on 13th. The Second Sex, translated by Constance Borde and Sheila Malovany-Chevallier, Alfred Knopf, 2010. The Parshley translation may augment but should not replace, this translation.
Recommended: If you are competent in French, I have six two-volume sets of the original French text which I will loan out in class, or you may want to buy them, but read Moi’s “While We Wait” before you decide which edition. See me for details.

Learning Outcomes
Students should complete this course having acquired a strong working knowledge of 1) the area of feminist philosophy called feminist phenomenology, what its central commitments and contributions are to feminist philosophy more broadly, and how it challenges some commitments in canonical western philosophy 2) this central, classic text in feminist philosophy and feminist theory more broadly. Students should complete this course having practiced and increased their competence in 1) careful, close reading of a philosophical text, 2) critical analysis, orally and in writing, of arguments in the text and from secondary readings, 3) a critical examination of the social realities of gendered power as they are examined in the text, but more broadly, in lived experience. Students should complete this course having demonstrated their competence in/through writing an extensive, in depth essay or class presentation on an assigned philosophical question or chosen topic/text, as well as in selecting and defining an appropriate topic for scholarly analysis, and them completing a major research essay on that topic.

Course Requirements
Participation: Regular attendance and participation, with evidence of careful reading and preparation, is assumed for graduate students, and required for undergraduates.
Mid-Term Take-Home Exam: Undergraduates will take a mid-term take-home exam at the end of week 4.
Presentation: Graduate students will work to prepare a formal presentation on a thematic set of secondary readings in conversation with the primary text. Assignments will be decided and guidelines will be handed out in class.
Paper Proposal: All students will submit a 4-page paper proposal for their final paper project on Thursday of week 8. Guidelines for the paper proposal will be handed out in class.

Final Paper: All students will write a final paper (7-10 pages for undergraduates; 10-15 pages for graduates), due on Wednesday of final’s week by 5pm.

Accomodations for Disability
If you have a documented disability please see me at the beginning of the term so we can provide appropriate accommodations.

Grading
Undergraduates
- Participation 30% of final grade
  Your participation grade will be based on a holistic assessment including your preparation for each class period as evidenced in vigorous participation in discussion, any small assignments to increase participation in class, and your attendance.
- Mid-Term Exam 25% of final grade
- Paper proposal 20% of final grade
- Final Paper 25% of final grade

Graduates
- Presentation 20% of final grade
- Paper Proposal 20% of final grade
- Final Paper 60% of final grade

(Inadequate preparation and/or participation in class will automatically reduce your final letter grade by at least one grade, no matter what your performance on these other requirements is. See me right away if you think that may be an issue for you.)

Statement on Academic Honesty
It is my practice to assign a grade of F for the course to students who engage in acts of academic dishonesty. Academic dishonesty may include the following:

Plagiarism: Plagiarism is the inclusion of someone else’s product, words, ideas, or data as one’s own work. When a student submits work for credit that includes the product, words, ideas, or data of others, the source must be acknowledged by the use of complete, accurate, and specific references, such as footnotes. By placing one’s name on work submitted for credit, one certifies the originality of all work not otherwise identified by appropriate acknowledgements. Verbatim statements by others must be enclosed by quotation marks or set off from the regular text as indented extracts.

Students will avoid being charged with plagiarism if there is acknowledgement of indebtedness. Indebtedness must be acknowledged whenever: 1) one quotes another person’s actual words or replicates all or part of another’s product; 2) one uses another person’s ideas, opinions, work, data, or theories, even if they are completely paraphrased in one’s own words; 3) one borrows facts, statistics, or other illustrative material—unless the information is common knowledge.
Unauthorized collaboration with others on papers or projects can inadvertently lead to a charge of plagiarism. If in doubt, consult the instructor or seek assistance from the staff of Academic Learning Services (68 PLC, 346-3226). In addition, it is plagiarism to submit as your own any academic exercise prepared totally or in part by another person, even if that person is acting as a tutor or editor (and ends up substantially producing part of the work).

Fabrication: Fabrication is the intentional use of information that the author has invented when he or she states or implies otherwise, or the falsification of research or other findings with the intent to deceive.

Examples include, but are not limited to: 1) citing information not taken from the source indicated; 2) listing sources in a reference not used in the academic exercise; 3) inventing data or source information for research or other academic exercises.

Cheating: Cheating is an act of deception by which a student misrepresents or misleadingly demonstrates that he or she has mastered information on an academic exercise that he or she has not mastered, including the giving or receiving of unauthorized help in an academic exercise.

Examples include but are not limited to: 1) copying from another student’s work; 2) collaborating without authority or allowing another student to copy one’s work in a test situation; 3) using the course textbook or other material not authorized for use during a test; 4) using unauthorized material during a test; for example, notes, formula lists, cues on a computer, photographs, symbolic representations, and notes written on clothing; 5) resubmitting substantially the same work that was produced for another assignment without the knowledge and permission of the instructor; 6) taking a test for someone else or permitting someone else to take a test for you.
Calendar/Dates

Note: * means that secondary readings listed must be read/presented on the date they are listed, otherwise they may be presented on another date (to be scheduled); # means a secondary reading is required for undergrads and grads, otherwise secondary readings are only required for graduates—this only applies to a few essays.
