Welcome to the Philosophy of Love & Sex. Love and sex are central to life, and less seemingly, to philosophy: the discipline dedicated to the love of wisdom. This course offers an introduction to a myriad of topics central to the philosophy of love & sex, thinking primarily about the tension, or perhaps, the ambiguity, that exists in the fact that our bodies create our worlds, but that equally, our world(s) create, form, and shape our bodies, and the bodies of others: determining from the outset what bodies are seen as good bodies, proper bodies, desirable bodies, bodies worth loving or not loving, etc.
EXAMS

CRITICAL REFLECTIONS
(25%) 5 X 5% EACH

These are short, bi-monthly responses (500 words, which translates to approximately one single-spaced page) to be turned into Canvas by 11:59 PM every other Sunday. Please turn in your response in either a .doc, .docx, or PDF, and note your word count at the top of your paper. You will have a prompt posted at the beginning of every other week, and will be expected to respond to the question by engaging the readings. You can always turn in a response early, so no late responses will be accepted. You can find a more detailed rubric outlining expectations for the weekly responses on Canvas.

PARTICIPATION
(10%) 10 WEEKS X 1% EACH

Your participation should be evaluated based on your in-class participation, attendance, preparedness with (annotated) text(s), contribution to in-class activities, debates, etc. By the end of every week, you will be asked to self-evaluate your participation for that week and to post your grade (A-F), along with a 1-2 sentence explanation of your grade, on Canvas (due by 11:59 PM each Sunday). I’ll leave it up to you to honestly evaluate your participation for the week, and will only change grades as I see fit. I want you to take your attendance into consideration when evaluating yourself for the week. This doesn’t mean that you won’t lose points for missing class; it only means that you don’t gain points from simply being there.

To have a reading annotated means to show evidence that you’ve been engaging in a conversation with your texts: highlighting, underlining, noting your reactions, questions, comments, noting/defining key terms/ideas, writing summaries, etc. I want to see that you participated with your text. You will be expected to come to every class with that session’s readings annotated.

This class will deal with difficult topics and themes, including sexual violence. We will create an environment where open discussion and debates are encouraged. The best way that you can prepare for these conversations is by reading the texts and developing questions and comments relating directly to the ideas presented there. Discussion and debate are no longer possible when an individual’s personal experiences are attacked and/or discounted. Therefore, you will be expected to use respectful language and maintain an attitude of openness and curiosity as we explore the issues raised in this class.

Access needs come in many different shapes and sizes. Please notify me if there are aspects of the instruction or design of this course that result in disability-related barriers to your participation. You are also encouraged to contact the Accessible Education Center in 360 Oregon Hall at 541-346-1155 or at uoacc@uoregon.edu.

The UO is committed to providing an environment free of all forms of discrimination and sexual harassment, including sexual assault, domestic and dating violence and gender-based stalking. If you (or someone you know) has experienced or experiences gender-based violence (intimate partner violence, attempted or completed sexual assault, harassment, coercion, stalking, etc.), know that you are not alone. UO has staff members trained to support survivors in navigating campus life, accessing health and counseling services, providing academic and housing accommodations, helping with legal protective orders, and more.

I understand that much of the material in this class will feel personal. If for any reason you feel you are unable to participate in a discussion, you have options. You may leave a classroom discussion, no questions asked, if a discussion feels triggering to you. If you anticipate a difficulty in advance, please email me or come see me about alternate forms of participation, assignments, etc.

As a policy, there will be no technology allowed in the classroom, although I do make exceptions. Firstly, a technological exception as requested through AEC will always be permitted. If this does not apply to you, but you believe that the use of technology in the classroom will benefit your education, you must do the following:

1) Email or talk to me and provide your reasoning, and;
2) Sign an agreement that you will not use your technology in the classroom for anything other than class-related purposes.

Please be aware that all UO employees are required reporters. This means that if you tell me about a situation, I may have to report the information to my supervisor or the Office of Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity. Although I have to report the situation, you will still have options about how your case will be handled, including whether or not you wish to pursue a formal complaint. Our goal is to make sure you are aware of the range of options available to you and have access to the resources you need.

If you wish to speak to someone confidentially, you can call 541-346-SAFE, UO’s 24h hotline, to be connected to a confidential counselor to discuss your options.
