

Barry I. Gordon, AICP, LEED Green Associate

SUMMARY

Mr. Barry Gordon is the Chief Operating Office and Senior Planner of The Urban Collaborative LLC, an award-winning interdisciplinary planning and urban design firm that provides leadership for the Department of Defense's growing needs for environmentally, fiscally, and socially sustainable military installations. He has over 15 years of experience in sustainability design and development, education and training, policy development, urban design and landscape preservation planning for the Department of Defense, and private and public-sector clients. Mr. Gordon assists federal agencies with the development of sustainable planning policies, implementation, and visualization strategies. He is a leading member of a team whose designs and collaborative planning processes are setting a new standard for military, municipal, and private development planning. Mr. Gordon has served as the primary and contributing agent to over 75 area development plans, 20 sustainability and energy master plans, 18 architectural designs, 11 full master plans, 22 technical plans, 57 form-based codes, numerous planning feasibility studies and transportation and aviation studies on Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Joint Base installations. Barry is also a Non-Tenure Track Faculty Member of the Architecture Department at the University of Oregon and the Assistant Director of the Urban Design Lab. The Urban Design Lab mission is to support student education through project-based service learning. The UDL Directors do this by committing to a collaborative and contextual approach to spatial design practices and to the planning of unique and sustainable landscapes, urban spaces, communities, cities and regions. We use a mode of practice that engages the client – and a wider spectrum of users and stakeholders – to generate knowledge to inform the visioning and design process, employing a transparent, collaborative, and consensus-building approach.
